

Sharing Our Voices: Moebius Stories Around the World

Moebius Voices Story Board by Many Faces of Moebius Syndrome (MFOMS)

Every story matters. Every voice makes a difference. The Moebius Voices Story Board, created by Many Faces of Moebius Syndrome (MFOMS), is a living collection of real stories from people and families around the world affected by Moebius Syndrome — a rare neurological condition that causes facial paralysis and limited eye movement.

Each shared experience reveals the strength, courage, and creativity within our community. Whether it's a child learning to communicate without a smile, a parent finding new ways to advocate, or an adult embracing life with confidence, these stories help others understand that Moebius Syndrome doesn't define a person — it highlights their resilience.

A Global Tapestry of Voices

Since its launch, the Moebius Voices Story Board has become the heart of the MFOMS mission — connecting families, friends, and advocates across continents. From the United States to Australia, from classrooms to medical conferences, these stories raise awareness, break down misconceptions, and celebrate the humanity behind every diagnosis.

New voices are added year-round, turning awareness into connection and compassion into action.

How to Share Your Story

Anyone can participate — individuals living with Moebius Syndrome, family members, friends, or supporters. You don't need to be a writer; our team helps shape your words while keeping your authentic voice. To add your own story or read others', visit our online Story Board at:

www.mfoms.org/story-book

Strength in Every Story

Every shared experience helps others feel seen, supported, and understood. Together, we are building a stronger global community — one story at a time.

For more information, resources, and upcoming awareness events, visit:

www.mfoms.org